

Kevin Mondloch

Kevin Mondloch has served on the Severe Weather Network board for three years. Prior he was the Director of Christ House in Alexandria, Virginia. His passion to walk with those experiencing homelessness began at a young age; the first homeless shelter in Fairfax County, Virginia opened in 1978 and bears his family's name. The compassion for those who are experiencing loss is the hallmark of Kevin's vocation. He is the Director of Education and Community Outreach for Borek Jennings, which provides Healing Services for those who are navigating an unnerving, life changing event. Born in central Minnesota, his family relocated to Washington, DC where he completed his undergraduate degree at James Madison University and graduate studies at the University of Virginia. He has three children in Chicago and Boston.
